In addition to production at Stag Lane, a number were assembled by De Havilland Canada at Downsview from what were British supplied dis-assembled units [ie there was no local "manufacture" as such]. Assemblies started arriving at Downsview in September 1930. They were given local c/n's, initially DHC.129-131 & 133-139 but these were re-sequenced from DHC.201 by December 1930 [and the earlier numbers simply continued the DH.60M sequence]. Whilst it had been hoped to service civilian orders, these were not forthcoming. However, fortunately, the Canadian Government took an interest and placed an initial order for RCAF blind flying trainers in December 1930 [this was Contract Demand CD333 for 10 aircraft – RCAF 169-178]. A further three aircraft [RCAF 179-181] were ordered under CD426 in January 1931 and was followed by an order for four [G-CYUR/UU] for Civil Government Air Operations [CGAO].

There were 25 Puss Moths assembled in all and were delivered in three batches. The first 19, (of which 17 were the above orders) were built in February/June 1931. Two (or three) more were built at the end of 1931 and the final 3 assembled in 1934/35.

It is likely that all Canadian-assembled DH.80As were fitted with Gipsy III.

RCAF Puss Moths were specially modified for blind flying instruction. This consisted mainly of a blind flying panel that was held in position along the ceiling of the cockpit by pins at its front end and by an elastic tensioner anchored at the rear of the aircraft. The panel was brought into use by pulling it forward over a hinge in the ceiling and down (against the tension), and then securing it by a couple of pins. The panel obscured the forward vision of the trainee, while triangular frosted glass obscured his side view. It was an ingenious system for which Verdon Levick was granted a patent in both Canada and the USA.

Initial deliveries to the RCAF appear to have been made to E Flight, 2 Sqn, Flying Training Wing [FTW] ; the FTW consisted of three Squadrons, each with three Flights. Despite early enthusiasm by the RCAF, the Puss Moth proved unsuitable to the strain placed on it by blind flying training. This was confirmed by a thorough stress analysis by the Aeronautical Engineering Department which revealed a number of weaknesses, even before the crash of G-CYUT on 21.3.32. This crash resulted in the grounding of all RCAF Puss Moths, and the rest of 1932 was spent trying to resolve the structural problems. In Oct 1932, it was decided to select six aircraft (169, 173, 174, 176, 177, 180) to be brought fully up to aerobatic standards, to allow blind flying training to be continued.

By the time these six aircraft returned to service in Feb/Mar 1933 (and following the severe budget cuts of early 1932), the FTW had been reduced to the Flying Training School [FTS], consisting of two Flights. By July of that year the Puss Moths had been withdrawn from the training role again. Besides six aircraft transferred to the Controller of Civil Aviation [CCA] for use by the District Inspectors [DI] across Canada, the remaining aircraft were either engaged in light transportation duties or were put into storage. Eventually, it was decided to withdraw all the RCAF Puss Moths in August 1935, at which time only 174 and 651 were active. In an act of frugality, instruments (and even Gipsy III engines) were removed from withdrawn Puss Moths and sent to DHC to be installed in the four Tiger Moths being assembled for the Flying Clubs. The CCA also replaced their remaining Puss Moths over the next twelve months.

4xPuss Moths were ordered 7.31 by Changsha, Honan Province via Arnhold & Co Ltd.

No identities known, it is reported that some of these aircraft were lost or captured in the Sino-Japanese war which commenced 10.31. None were however seized with the DH.60s at Mukden, Manchuria [Fongtien].

A report dated 9.32 commented that two Puss Moths had been supplied to Hunan Aviation Bureau, Changsha, Hunan Province by Arnhold & Co. A subsequent report [1938] has two Puss Moths operated by Hui Tung Aviation [or Air Navigation] Co, Peiping. This was a Japanese run company and thus the aircraft probably came from the Japan licence-production.

At 1/37, the Chinese AF was reported as still having 2 Puss Moths

CC- CHILE

Reports that LAN-Chile operated two Puss Moths in the mid 30s and that an "airworthy" LAN Puss Moth was displayed alongside their 707 CC-CEA in 1967 both refer to DH.60G Gipsy Moths.

CR-MAG see note

Note : CR-MAD is confirmed as a DH.80A, probably regd c.31/32 and second hand. Not c/n 2100 as has been suggested.

CR-MAG was probably ex South Africa and was owned by Armando Torre do Valle, Xai-Xai, Mocambique; named "Gaza III". It was flown to Portugal, departing 1.4.33 and arrived Lisbon 14.5.33. It was then flown on to London via Madrid, Biarritz and Paris.

"Marao" 2100

CR-L PORTUGUESE WEST AFRICA [ANGOLA]

CR-HAA is illustrated in Aeroplane 21.6.39 and is presumed to have become CR-LAH.
CR-LAH regd .38 to Adelino Amaral and was apparently ex British. It subsequently crashed. Possibly c/n 2040 or 2150.

A DH.80A [possibly the same as above] was owned .38 by Angola Aero Club and was flown by Capt Joaquin de Almeida Balthazar [the Club's chief instructor] on weekly mail services between Luanda and Point Noire, French Equatorial Africa.

ET- ETHIOPIA

It has been reported that Viscomte de Sibour's Puss Moth was bought by Ethiopia [by 6.35]. Its identity is unknown; however this report may simply have confused the purchase 3.30 by Ras Tafari, Regent of Abyssinia, of Sibour's DH.60M F-AJKT.

However, an unidentified DH.80A was acquired for use by Emperor Haile Selassie .36. Probably not given any identity and formally on charge of Imperial Ethiopian Air Force.

Notes: A number of Puss Moths were owned and operated in France under British marks, with UK nominee owners, because the French authorities initially declined to certify the type. See c/n 2070, 2075, 2158, 2185.

VP-KBW c/n 2154 was allegedly sold in France.

G-AAZY c/n 2025 delivered to Baron de Precourt, Paris July 1930 and written off 5.7.30.

One DH.80A was used by Groupe FFI (Forces Francais de l'Interieur) in Southern France during allied invasion wef 8.44. Coded "Z" - possibly F-ANRZ or F-APFZ?. This, or another was requisitioned at Ruelle and was operated by R18 [or R8] of Groupe FFI at Bordeaux [late 44] painted in invasion stripes and with white "Cross of Lorraine".

This is obviously an unofficial or incorrect serial and almost certainly relates to EM995 c/n 2173. It may have been incorrectly painted.
